

Business Aviation and the Environment Setting the Standards?

Brian Humphries CBE
President of the EBAA
Moderator

Setting the Standards

- Climate change is perhaps the ultimate global challenge.
- Aviation recognised the challenge even before Kyoto but little public action followed.
- Airspace users failed to reach a common position.
- Business aviation can take the lead.

Setting the Standards

- Business aviation is a small emitter but we can set the standard by doing more than our share.
- EBAA has proposed to offset 100 percent of carbon emissions but needs the support of the EU to achieve this goal affordably and efficiently.

Setting the Standards

- This session covers the EU scene from both the industry and the regulator viewpoints.
- Makes the link between the EU ETS and global initiatives at ICAO.

Setting the Standards

“Good corporate governance means that a company’s conduct exceeds what is required.”

(Klaus Schwab, Executive Chair of the World Economic Forum)
